FINALIST BRIEFING — CONFIDENTIAL

This document is for finalists' eyes only. By reading further you reaffirm the confidentiality terms you agreed to in the forum NDA. Do not share, screenshot, or paraphrase any portion of what follows to anyone who is not a finalist or member of the production team.

01 · The format

The finals will be hosted live. Both the winners-bracket final and the losers-bracket final will run in parallel: each finalist will face the other player in their bracket only — you will not be answering the same questions as the people in the other bracket. Both finals are 15 multiple-choice questions, one correct answer per question, untimed within reason. The host will call the start; questions appear; you answer; host advances.

After both bracket finals resolve, the winner of the winners-bracket and the winner of the losers-bracket meet in the championship match. The format of that championship will be announced separately.

02 · The topic (vague on purpose)

Both bracket finals share a single broad theme — a familiar, mainstream domain you've encountered for years through everyday life, travel media, or general schooling. The questions are recognition-and-recall format, not trivia-deep-cut format. Expect places, names, and origins. Expect at least a few that involve a globe.

We're keeping the topic vague intentionally. The finals are meant to be a show, not a study session. Show up, react to the questions on camera, be entertaining. If you over-prepare, the magic dies.

03 · How you'll join

- We'll send a calendar invite once the date is locked.
- Sign in to discuss.miaswebsites.art at least 24 hours before the show.
- If you haven't agreed to the NDA, the forum will redirect you to the agreement PM. Reply with "yes I agree" and you're in.
 - Once agreed, you'll see a category called Finals Room — that's where pre-show coordination happens. Drop a hello in the chat so we know your account is wired up.
 - On show day, join the live broadcast link 10 minutes early. We'll do a quick mic check.

04 · Conduct expectations

This is a family-friendly show. Don't curse, don't trash-talk, don't spoil anything for the audience. React naturally — laughs, groans, dramatic pauses, finger-guns at the camera, all welcome. The audience came for chemistry, so give them chemistry.

- Camera on, framed at chest-up.
- Mic check the night before the show.
- If you guess, guess out loud. Silence is poison on a show.
- Losing gracefully > winning awkwardly.
- If you need a moment, tell the host — we can pause.

05 · Strict no-go list

- Don't tell anyone what bracket you're in or who your opponent is until the host announces it on the broadcast.
- Don't research or screenshot any part of this brief.
- Don't compare notes with other finalists — including the person in your own bracket.
- Don't post in any public forum category about your finals participation. Use Finals Room only.
- Don't show this PDF to anyone, ever. Not even after the broadcast.

06 · What we ship to the audience

The bracket page, the standings, the live broadcast itself, and the post-show recap will all be public. Everything else — the format details, the question pool's exact composition, the back-and-forth chatter in Finals Room — stays inside the finalist circle. We'll publish a recap blog post after the championship that may quote your live reactions verbatim. If a specific reaction is sensitive, flag it to the host before the broadcast.

07 · Questions for us

Use the Finals Room category on the forum. We monitor it. Don't email about logistics — the forum is the source of truth, and we want a single audit trail for everyone.
